Japan Concedes On Trade

U.S. Will Get $260 Million In Concessions

By Peter T. Kilborn New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - Japan has greed to make $260 million in rade concessions and other mea sures to compensate the United States for "unfair" trade practices, U.S. officials have announced.

The agreement, the first of its kind with Japan, requires that the Japanese import $236 million more in U.S. goods as compensation for lapanese quotas on the imports of U.S. shoes and other leather goods.

It also imposes $24 million in tariff increases on U.S. imports of the leather goods that Japan protects at home from foreign compe-

Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, who announced the agreement. "This is the first time in a dispute like this that Japan has significantly opened its markets."

In the past, Japan has accepted mposition of retaliatory quotas or tariffs in the face of unfair trade practices, Mr. Yeutter said in a telephone interview Saturday. In agreeing to open its domestic markets to more imports, he said, Japan is serving the interest of freer world trade.

We settled this by obtaining access to their markets rather than by our closing our markets," Mr. Yeutter said.

The American products that Japan has agreed to increase imports of include paper, glass, industrial diamonds, engines, sporting goods, semiconductors and telecations equipment — a total 137 products on which tariffs would be

Japan also agreed to make per manent earlier tariff reductions on 242 other products and to lower tariffs on several aluminum products to bring them into line with U.S. tariffs.

Such Japanese trade concessions have often proved ineffective because of other practices that inhibit sales of foreign goods and because they have not been backed un with assurances to import a specific value of goods.

Mr. Yeutter said he thought the new concessions would hold. They're a responsible member of the trading community," he said.

Mr. Reagan's threat was made in a trade-policy speech on Sept. 23, when he said he would continue to that restrict imports of U.S. goods or give their exports an unfair advantage in the American market with special subsidies and other de-

Among the practices the admin-istration singled out was Japanese protection of its leather industry. It estimated then that the practice cost the U.S. leather industry $260 million in lost sales in Japan.

Earlier, Japan had refused to accept a U.S. proposal of the sort announced Saturday, but, at the request of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, the administration delayed retaliation until adjournment of the Diet, where the Japanese leather industry is strongly repre-

LOS ANGELES - For the first time in a generation, advertisers in the United States are exploiting anti-Soviet sentiment to make their points.

A spate of commercials, including ones for a national hamburger cham, a soft drink company, two brands of beer, a re-gional appliance cham, an electronics manufacturer and a television show, lampoon the Soviet people or their way of life.

The humorous tone of these commercials is a sharp departure from publicservice messages used by some companies during the Cold War in the 1950s.

Then, a magazine campaign by the Advertising Council attempted to persuade Americans to build better weapons by showing a ribbon-bedecked Russian soldier named Ivan, of whom it was said, "He's sold to the hilt on Red ideas, which means he's out to get you." Any such commercials would have ap-peared out of line during the anti-establish-

Soviet Says Afghanistan Discontent Is Widespread

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union has admitted there is widespread opposition to the pro-Moscow government of Alghanistan and said compromise and negotiation were needed to win popular support.

"Far from all people in Afghanistan, even among working sections of the population," accepted the revolution, the Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, said Samrday. The article came only a few days before the sixth anniversary of the intervention by Soviet troops.

The emphasis in the article on strong opposition and initial "errors" by over-enthusiastic Afghan Communists contrasted with earlier Soviet attempts to portray the Afghan resistance as consisting of U.S.-financed terrorists.

Pravda said the opposition "is not surprising for a backward, semifeudal country with deep-root-ed religious traditious and nearly total illiteracy.

"A considerable number of people fell for mendacious counterrevolutionary propaganda," Pravda said, but added that "errors of the first stage of the revolution had a negative effect, too."

The newspaper listed those mistakes as a "passion for revolutionary phrases and enforcement of social reforms without due account for the real situation and social and national specifics of the country." A statement in November by the Afghan president, Babrak Karmal mentioned similar errors. But it did not emphasize the theme of the Pravda article, which was titled "Expanding the social base of the Afghan revolution."

Time is needed to remove the accumulated prejudices, and to dispel illusions," Pravda said. "It is necessary to create an atmosphere of positive dialogue between public and political forces, including those who so far stick to position

Dispirited, Walesa Seeks a New Course

By Jackson Diehl Washington Pear Service
GDANSK, Poland — It is the fourth December since the sup-pression of the independent trade union Solidarity, and Lech Wa-lesa is at home in his apartment here, nursing an ulcer. He has been excused on doctors' orders from his electrician's job at the Lenin Shipyard. There is no respite, however, from an investigation by a Gdansk prosecutor, daily meetings with sup-porters and advisers, or the slow, wearing grind of a political strug-gle in which, Mr. Walesa says, there is no possibility now to have a solution." It is overcast and cold in Gdansk, and Mr. Walesa sits restlessly at a table in his study, chain-smoking cigarettes and sipping tea.

"Maybe it's the weather," he says, staring out the window. But there's no disguising his mood: Solidarity is stymed, and Mr. Walesa, its symbol, spokesman and still artive leader, is feeling deeply frustrated.

"The effectiveness of our work is not very great," he said in an interview. "Until now we were fighting with the authorities. Now we are looking for different methods but we don't have any. If we find some they must be better orchestrated and better understood."

Above all, this has been a year in which Mr. Walesa and thousands of Poles who still support him have begun to see their future as a long, upfull battle to keep the union's ideals alive despite constant repression, the demoraliza-tion and apathy of much of the public and the inherent paralysis of an organization committed to nonviolent tactics in the face of a for stopping them."

Solidarity's symbolic and coltural strength is still formidable. Much of its underground leadership has cluded security forces for four years, and thousands of supporters participate in a clandestine publishing industry of a size and dynamism without parallel or precedent in a Communist-ruled country.

Churches around the country overflowed this year for the union's anniversaries and cultural events, which always end with the emotional singing of Polish hymns by thousands who raise their arms and spread their fin-gers in Solidarity's victory sign. Nevertheless, the union's ef-forts at practical political action have been blocked on every front. Street demonstrations no longer attract widespread support, and an attempt at a national strike in July failed.

"We have losses because of that," Mr. Walesa said. "We have good people being arrested, and we need them somewhere else."

Dozens of Solidarity activists, including three of its top leaders, remain in prison despite a recent vernment release of some politgovernment reasons still free face ical prisoners. Those still free face the possibility of summary arrest and sentencing under a newly sanctioned penal code, or the loss of their jobs through purges, such as one now under way in universi-ties. On its fifth anniversary on Ang. 31, Solidarity issued a long report on the national situation. and Mr. Walesa called on anthorities to discuss it. The official reaction was scornful. In Mr. Walesa's view, Solidarity's best course in the present sit-uation is to focus on devising its own goals for the country, avoiding confrontations with authorities that sap its strength.

"We have to carry out our plan and not divert our attention to secondary spheres of conflict that month of the in are not created by us," he said. lodged in court.

"We need peace while working on

At the same time, Mr. Walesa believes that Solidarity and its supporters must remain outside the political system or its institutions, refusing to cooperate with Communist authorities on their terms. "When I go into the system, I want to know what for," he said "because it's difficult to order someone into a liquor store and then decide you want bread."

His views, however, are no more dominant within Solidarity's organization than they were when he headed its 16-month legal existence. Some of the union's activists now favor an organized move by its supporters into officially sanctioned unions, factory self-management councils, professional associations and even the legislature and security forces in order to reshape them from the tion to disrupt General Wojciech laruzeishi's government.

In the end, most of the union leaders agree that Solidarity must now wait in the expectation that the authorities', failure to solve Poland's problems without public support will lead them toward another era of liberalization.

Even in the gloom of another December, Mr. Walesa leaves little doubt that he has accepted that long uncertain struggle.

"I'm not discouraged," he insisted. "I'm boiling inside. As much as I can and as much as I am able in my health, I will my to uphold the ideals."

U.S. Judge Upholds Minority Hiring WASHINGTON (WP)—A U.S. federal judge has upheld a minorityhiring plan in Birmingham, Alabama, rejecting the Justice Department's contention that the city is discriminating against white employees.
The U.S. District Court judge, Sam C. Pointer Jr., said in a ruling land Friday that a 1981 consent decree allows Birmingham to hire and promote blacks and women in municipal jobs over more qualified white male candidates. He said the agreement was a valid defense against charges of discrimination. 1974, only two of the fire department's 640 employees were black. In 1981 the city and the Justice Department signed a consent decree in which Birmingham promised to meet minority-hiring goals by giving preference to blacks and women. The agreement was signed shortly before William Bradford Reynolds, who opposes race-conscious hiring plans, became head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

Rome Court Ends Travel In Papal Attack Inquiry

By Michael Dobbs

SOFIA - An Italian court ended Saturday an exhaustive international inquiry into the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in May 1981. As the trial of three Bulgarians and five Turks accused of plotting to kill the Polish-born pontiff nears its end, Italian judges visited the city where the alleged Soviet bloc conspiracy was supposed to have originated in the summer of 1980. But they were unable to refute denials by the Bulgarian defendants that they had any dealings with Mehmet Ali Agea, the pope's

The session in Bulgaria con-cludes hearing of testimony by the Italian court, which already has traveled to West Germany, Turkey, Switzerland and the Netherlands in its attempts to piece together the background of the assassination at-

Defense and prosecution counsel will make their concluding speeches in mid-January. The verdict is expected in early February.

Under Italian law, there are three possible verdicts: guilty, in-nocent and acquittal for lack of proof.

According to the Italian indict-ment, Mr. Agea was paid the equiv-alent of $1.8 million to shoot the pope on behalf of the Bulgarian secret services at a time when the Soviet Union was worried about social and political upheavals in Plans for the assassination atempt were alleged to have been made at a series of meetings be-tween Mr. Agea and his alleged Bulgarian accomplices in Sofia and Rome.

Despite more than 100 court sessions and the interrogation of more than 50 witnesses, the court has been unable to find any trace of the money alleged to have been paid to the Turkish gumman for shooting the pope. Nor has there been independent corroboration of the numerous meetings that Mr. Agea said he had with the Bulgarian defendants.

The trial began May 27 in Rome.
It was originally dubbed "the trial of the century" by Italian news organizations. But it seems likely to disappoint both Western proponents of a "Bulgarian connection" to the assassination attempt and Communist propagandists who accused the CIA of launching a smear campaign against the Soviet bloc.

Todor S. Aivazov

Saturday's session was devoted to a cross-examination of Lieutenant Colonel Zhelyo K. Vasilev and Todor S. Aivazov, two Bulgarian officials formerly stationed in Rome who were accused by Mr. Agea of helping plan the attack on the pope. Bulgaria has refused Italian requests to extradite the two men, who left Italy in 1982 before they could be arrested.

An elaborate alibi presented by Mr. Aivazov for the days leading up to the assassination attempt was challenged by the Italian judges, who cited contradictory testimony by other witnesses.

Mr. Aivazov, the former cashier at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome, pleaded that it was difficult to remember his precise movements four and a half years later.

The one concrete result of the trial has been the opening of a new investigation into Mr. Agea's Turkish acquaintances. This opens up the prospect of another round of political significance. The store reopened for business Saturday legal proceedings with a new set of defendants after the current trial.

Film Critic Declares A Pox on Sequels

Paul Attanasio, film critic for the Washington Post, has con-demned the current epidemic of film sequels with known stories and known stars, like "Godfa-ther II," "Rocky IV" or the string of "Star Wars" and "Indi-ana Jones" films. This kind of thinking, he says, "scrupulously obeys the law of fast food — if people know what to expect beforehand, they'll flock to it, even if the product is second-rate.

"It wasn't always this way. The people who founded Hollywood — men like Louis B. Mayer, Harry Cohn, Sam Gold-wyn, Karl Laemmle and Jack Warner - were uneducated. generally boorish and sometimes violent, but they knew what they liked and were willing to wager all they had that the public would like it, too.

"They were risk takers and they got rich. What's wrong with the New Hollywood isn't that it's too interested in making money. but quite the opposite—the stu-dios just want to limit their losses. A sequel, a big-name star, is a kind of insurance policy."

A Dangerous Mirage?

The "star wars" missile defense program is moving steadily forward. Hundreds of research contracts have been let. Important technical advances have already been claimed. The Russians seem desperate to stop the program. "Star wars" is building a constituency.

Although it stoutly resists its formal name, the Strategic Defense Initiative has many tempting features. Since defensive systems stretch engineering and computer design to the limits, America is opening a high-technology race in which the Soviet Union will be hard pressed to keep up. That edge may compensate for the advantage the Russians gained in land-based missiles. Effective missile defenses might strengthen deterrence, and diminish catastrophe if deterrence failed.

As its proponents concede, a practical defense system may not be within immediate reach, but the pace of technical advance can be forced if enough resources are brought to bear, as with the Apollo shots to the moon. Even if the research effort should lead nowhere, Moscow may pay to buy it off. At the least the effort will spin off advanced technology for use in the commercial tussle with Japan. So what's to lose? If "star wars" erodes deterrence, there is everything to lose. The hard questions, unaddressed when President Reagan floated his vision in March 1983, remain unanswered: What combination of delensive and offensive systems might improve stability? Why should the Russians agree to limit offensive missiles? Will defense protect cities or only missile silos? If cities are to be defended, why not have civil defense, too? The SDI is lurching forward, but no one is sure in what direction. Officials offer a potpourri of conflicting goals and justifications. Mr. Reagan talks of sharing the technology about gaining strategic superiority. The lure of technology and contracts distorts the debate. stilling the doubts in laboratories and among allies. Even the technology may be a false promise, with little commercial spin-off.

Trying to build "star wars" now, says a critic, John Pike, "is roughly comparable to the Hayes administration trying to decide [in 1880] if it wanted to buy an air force." Technology can be forced forward by a few years, not by decades. So far the claims of progress by the SDI director, Lieutenant General James Abrahamson, have been such empty razzledazzle that federal scientists are repudiating them in embarrassment. They say experiments are designed to produce "stunts and demonstrations." A much heralded advance with a nuclear-powered X-ray laser now seems to rest on misinterpretation of a faulty instrument.

The illusion of progress contrived by General Abrahamson complements the unreality of Mr. Reagan's vision. Instead of setting clear standards for a new defense-based nuclear strategy, he has launched a $26-billion jugger-naut in pursuit of a technical fix for an unde-fined goal. When the juggernaut has finished blundering about, will the world be safer?

Without a clear guide, the SDI promises to be a thicket of dangerous illusions. Instead of winning Soviet concessions, it may force a buildup of new Soviet missiles. Instead of forcing new technology, it may mostly batten off civilian advances. Since any defense system must work better against a second strike than a first, "star wars" will come to appear offensive and so crode stability. Mr. Reagan has heard a voice from the stars. He bears the heavy burden of proving that it was no Siren's song.

Listen to Yevtushenko

Yevrushenko's political ear is highly developed. A brilliant polemicist, he expresses the ideals of the Soviet Union's post-Stalin gener-ation at shrewdly calculated moments of opportunity. When he and other writers dare to escalate their cry for freer speech, they stage a political event of major importance. Let us first lighten their burden. Invariably, the Kremlin responds to such dissent by charging that it plays into enemy hands. The Krem-lin would do well to understand that cases like this bring no joy to thoughtful Americans. They deplore repression for the same reasons that motivate patriots like Mr. Yevtushenko. They believe that free pursuit of the truth is essential to progress, and to peace.

That certainly was Mr. Yevtushenko's argument before the censors mauled the text of his speech at this month's writers' congress. The poet pleaded with the efficiency-minded new Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev. Recognize that Soviet farming is a mess because Stalin killed off "the precious agricultural wisdom" of millions of peasants, he urged. Recognize that Soviet industry cannot decently clothe its people because party hacks suppressed com-puter science in its infancy. Recognize that corrupt and inefficient elites will prey on the Soviet population as long as scholars and writers are barred from criticism of the system. Recognize that the ideals of Soviet society will ring hollow as long as the most obvious facts about the Soviet revolution are suppressed.

Mr. Yevushenko is saying that factory workers will not be creative until writers, too, are allowed to be. To which Americans would add that their discussions with the new Soviet regime would be greatly advanced if it learned to accept more honest discussion among its own people. Pursuing the truth about Trotsky and Stalin, Khrushchev and Brezhnev is not just an academic concern. It goes hand in hand with learning to deal with Ronald Reagan and to be wise about arms control.

As Mr. Yevtushenko put it, "Bureaucratic check marks indicating that an undertaking went over smoothly are still not the first signs of the long-awaited changes. Articles rhetorically calling for publicity are not the same as publicity itself." When the censors got through cutting this and other vital passages, Mr. Yevtushenko's appeal was reduced to just more rhetoric. But unless the poet has lost his fine sense of timing, Mr. Gorbachev has not heard the last of what some of the smartest Soviet people are thinking, and struggling to say. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Secretary Shultz Is Right

It compels attention when a cabinet officer. having lost an important argument on the inside, goes public in dissent on the outside. Secretary of State George Shultz has done this now on the use of lie detectors.

Hard on the heels of a presidential directive extending polygraph examinations well beyond the intelligence agencies where their reg-ular use is an established condition of employment, Mr. Shultz has said that he considers them unreliable and erratic. He adds: "The minute in this government I am told that I'm not trusted is the day that I leave."

Mr. Shultz was resoundingly right. In re-sponse, the president quickly excused him (and himself) from taking a test.

But the implications of the secretary's statement surely went beyond the immediate question of whether he himself would be asked to submit to a polygraph test. Having suggested that he would consider such a request an assault on his integrity and trustworthiness, he has surely also suggested that administering polygraph tests within his department would amount to an assault on the integrity and trustworthiness of his employees.

Lie detector tests are not simply intrusive. As Mr. Shultz has indicated, they are also fallible. They rest on a presumption of distrust. Rather than give a special dispensation to a single member of his government, a wise president would make plain that he does not want in his cabinet anyone who would take the test. From the start, the Reagan administration has tended to tilt hard to the security side of issues that involve a conflict between security and privacy. The past year's spy disclosures have enabled the administration to push forward its lie detector program. But the new directive has the look of a hasty catch-up meant to cover recent embarrassments and to avoid the burden of less intrusive security techniques or the shame of admitting how often the people in charge of protecting the government's secrets have been incompetent. It is the easiest thing in the world for these people, when one of their failures becomes prominent, to whine that they do not have enough special draconian laws and gimmicks to do the job. It is a form of covering up a faulty record by blaming it on something else.

The argument is made that the government has an evident. large and growing need to protect its secrets, and an unquestionable right to do so, and also that lie detectors are useful and can be used discreetly and respectably But against these claims must be set the dispiriting record of abuse of this instrument and the special alarms of intrusiveness it sets off.

It is good to have Secretary Shultz taking a stand on principle here. He is right. The government should listen to him and absorb the full implication of what he is saying. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

1910: British Mine Toll Is 341 Dead LONDON - It is now certain that none of the men entombed [on Dec. 21] in the Yard mine, near Bolton, can be alive. But instead of 352, the authorities put the number of men who went below as 341. The reduction of the total number of victims still leaves the disaster the most serious in this country for nearly half a century. Rescue parties, working among great difficulties, found in one place a heap of 47 bodies of men and of boys evidently caught by the flames as they were hurrying to safety. The Morning Leader correspondent says the worst part of this is to come. Wagons full of coffins have been passing through the lines of watchers. The mine has been regarded as a model both by its owner and by colliery experts.

1935: Spy Ring Arrested in Belgium LIEGE — Belgian police say they have put behind bars four members of a spy ring which furnished the German espionage service with valuable Belgian and French military secrets. The ring's specialty was smuggling documents into Luxembourg by pinning them on the underside of railway carriage seats with thumb tacks. After raids on the four men's homes by the police, who found a large number of incriminating documents, all four confessed. René Defauves, 33-year-old electrical technician and leader of the ring, said he got 46,000 francs for his activities during the past three months. The police claim to have proof that the men turned over papers to Dr. Brandt, of the German espionage service in Luxembourg.

The Narcotics Problem Is Bad and Getting Worse

WASHINGTON — Drug abuse evolved in the 1960s and 1970s into a major concern of U.S. foreign policy, the focus being to close down the international drug trade. In the 1980s the depressing reality is that things get worse.

The Reagan administration claims major gains, including lunge seizures, crop eradication and substitution programs, as well as law enforcement campaigns assing especially the cocs growers.

campaigns against, especially, the coca growers and distributors of South America and Central and distributors of South America and Central America. Still, from or through a score of nations, tens of thousands of tous of drugs a year flow into the fabulous U.S. market. The supplies of cocaine may have quadrupled in the Reagan time. It gets cheaper and more plentiful. There are said to be 5,000 new American users every day.

Only in Afghanistan, where the Soviet invasion has had the effect of curtailing poppy cultivation, is the drug situation improving.

is the drug situation improving.

While coca brought income to peasants whose alternative was misery, Latin Americans could live, uneasily, with the traffic. When local abuse started spreading and in particular when the profits created autonomous centers of power that defied government authority and even toppled governments, Latins were seized with true concern. Not just North American nagging but their own alarm spurs their policy now.

Drugs are still seen in the United States mainly as a problem of personal lives or, at worst, class blight. But in countries with weaker institutions, drugs become a threat to the national integrity - By Stephen S. Rosenfeld in Mexico, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Jamaica, the Bahamas and elsewhere. Persistent allegations made against the head of the National Guard, one of whose accusers was found headless not long ago.

indicate total rottenness at the core in Panama.

All this has produced some nasty inter-American political vibrations. For years people in the United States have felt that the Latins were subverting them with their supply, but now some of the Latins feel that the United States is subverting them with its demand. What they previously saw as a gringo problem has become a Latin problem for which, in their minds, the United States remains ultimately responsible. The mood seems to be one of building recrimination and tension. The prudent expectation is that it will darken.

The Reagan administration has directed special rage at Cuba and Nicaragna for suspected complicity in the drug traffic. It is hard to believe that no drug money flows into subversion or terrorism connected to those countries. Still, if Cuba and Nicaragua fell off the map the stuff would keep coming through in immense quantities. That puts the United States in the situation of having to work out these rending problems with friendly countries with which it is conducting a great deal of other difficult and necessary business at the same time. Politically it is difficult for Latin leaders to ask their publics to make economic sacrifices and accept unavoidably high-visibility anti-drug co-operation with the United States. They can see the relatively small size of U.S. compensatory aid programs and the U.S. inability to protect Latin societies against the personal and institutional violence of the drug traffic. They can hear frustrated lence of the drug traffic. They can hear inustrated Americans threatening to retaliate against the trade and aid of countries whose anti-drug cooperation is found wanting. Knowing of the exploding and apparently insatiable U.S. demand, they can be forgiven for wondering if Washington is a reliable and compassionate ally in this deadly war. The fight against drugs tends to stiffen those who get bound up in it — to make them think that others are legy and permissive and to turn them to others are lazy and permissive and to turn them to ideas include using the military to intercept drug ships and planes; making the war against drugs the very highest priority; legalizing drugs to take the profit out of the trade; toughening the law or suspending certain constitutional protections. A greater against of purchaseleged ideas like these is greater agitation of rough-edged ideas like these is one price that society is probably going to have to pay for its past indifference and neglect.

Something else: A notion persists in many U.S. quarters that a certain noncriminal or "recreational" use of drugs is permissible; anyway it's not the worst thing in the world. Many members of the educated classes prefer to concentrate their minds on the abstract horrors of nuclear war. But drugs are the worst thing in the world, and they are real.

About a Winter Feast and Our Secular Possibilities

Paris — If Western society is largely secularized today—and it is — why bother with Christmas?

The essential theological meaning of Christmas is that God being of Christmas is that God bols that are wrenched from their setting, gutted and sentimentalized, turned to profit and entertainment. One might reasonably think it better to go back to the pure paganism of celebrating the winter solstice with bonfires, rather than carry on with this blasphemous parody of the Christian feast.

brations of the present pay dumb but significant tribute to the origins of a civilization. Secular though the West may be today, the best, and sometimes the worst, in its values, behavior, expectations and view of history and life derive from the religion of its origins. The ideas of progressive and redemptive devel-opment in individual lives and in history, of individual destiny and individual responsibility, which characterize the West, are derived from Christianity and Judaism. These differ fundamentally from the ideas of the major Asian religions that existence is a burden to be submitted to, or to be escaped.

And yet ... The Christmas cele-

most, a secular affair: a vast com-mercial enterprise exploiting sym-is a radical notion. The Greek gods just God exists, things will be sorted mingled familiarly with men and women and underwent passion and weakness, but they remained im-mortal. The God of the Old Testament was not only immortal but omnipotent, while majestically in-tervening in the affairs of the unruly humans He had created. In Christianity God becomes fully a human being subjected to the violence, suf-fering, injustice and mortality of human life. This is not something gods were supposed to do. Christmas celebrates this mortality of God, the central event in the story of the West - since even if the event did not occur, even if Bethlehem, the manger, the shep-herds and kings, Mary and Joseph and Jesus were all total invention, nothing, nonetheless, was ever the same again in Western civilization. Western civilization has been shaped by this religion. But what, then, is implied when a large major-ity no longer accept religion? Religion offers reason to deal with the world with a certain reserve, since out outside of historical time. This idea is both consoling for the poor, the sick and halt; the persecuted and intimidating for the powerful and successful. For them there are always those troubling texts about the impossibility of serving both God and mamnon, the camel that must go through the needle's eye, the rich man and Lazarus. Secular man, though, has no rea-son to think that justice is going to be sorted out after the curtain of time falls. What is he to do? What distance can he take from time and history? What significance can Christmas have to him? It is an aspect of the fundamental ethical aspect or the industrial clinical question posed to a non-religious society: Why live by any standard other than pure self-interest and self-aggrandizement, if life is isolated, without larger significance, ex-tinguished at the end?

Answers exist, of course. Some are empirical (altruism pays; cooperation provides its own justifications); others involve a form of stoicism, an existential ethic dictating that one behaves well because that But a religious man or woman today makes much the same choice. In the contemporary world the Pascalian wager that God exists demands a bigger stake than perhaps ever before. One simply has to argue that however absurd the idea may be of an omnipotent God, it is less absurd than the alternatives. It is (to make what theologisms call the teleological argument) less absurd than to think that the physical universe as we know it — in its infinity of space and multiplication of solar systems, born in unthinkable explo-sion and vanishing into antimatter and the intimacy and intensity of botanical and biological symmetries, not to speak of self-conscious man himself, are the product of hazard. Or so this writer says.

In either case, the winter feast, pagan or Christian, offers justification to us stoics, existential or Christian, that life itself waxes as well as wanes, like the winter light, and that there are possibilities of redemption, whether it be of one life or of the collectivity of lives, in how we conduct ourselves.

The Caper of the Keeper That Didn't Shock France

By William Safire

PARIS — A "keeper," in news-paper parlance, is a story held for publication at a time when it can have the most political effect. This too-careful timing of news is frowned on in America as advocacy journal-ism. Columnists and editorial writers are expected to time their blasts to influence lawmakers and voters be-cause we are licensed mind-benders. but news page reporting that happens to go to print just before a vote suggests manipulation by the media.

What looks to me like a Paris-

Washington "keeper" was employed recently to affect American support for funding of the 40-year-old light to prevent takeover of all of Europe's labor movement by Communists.

On Nov. 27 a left-wing daily in Paris, Liberation, which is bidding for the circulation of the more sobersided Le Monde, splashed a piece originating in a tax-exempt founda-tion in Washington supported by Greenpeace, Playboy and the Gan-nett Foundation, among others. The story was about "secret funding" of anti-Communist labor unions in France by the National Endowment for Democracy. That is the Washington outlit set up two years ago by the Reagan administration to channel money to those political parties and unions struggling to protect free elec-tions and democratic values abroad. Not much fuss was raised in France, but in Washington some congressmen professed to be shocked at the revelation that the NED was doing the job it had been set up to do. As a New York Times article pointed out, the Libération story came at a pivotal time for the endowment," just before a Senate-

1986 appropriation. A year ago a similar story broke just before the House voted, causing panicky representa-tives to cut all funds for the anti-Communist cinipaign. (The funds were restored in a House-Senate conference.) A pattern of leftist "keep-ers" to halt aid to help free mions protect democracy is emerging.

To undermine the endowment, the aroused Democratic congressmen demanded to know why any money was going into a country like France, which is a functioning democracy. Why didn't the United States give such aid only to democratic institu-tions in the Third World? Was it trying to destabilize the Socialist government of François Mitterrand? The answer to that is plain to anyone aware of organized labor's struggle to resist Communist takeover in Europe. Since the end of World War Liberty: Some Questions II, Communist organizers have targeted labor unions as their central source of power. They have concentrated on strategic industries like mines and electricity; in Britain not so long ago, the coal miners profoundly influenced the party that now their leader is trying to form a West European pro-Soviet alliance.

labor did not run for cover. Force Ouvrière said it was proud to be associated with the AFL-CIO, adding that many recipients were union or-ganizers forced out of Poland and Afghanistan. The scandale fizzled. In Washington the leftist alliance failed again. After some congressmen pressed the endowment's director to agree to make public all grants, conferees appropriated $18 million, the same as last year. However, the harassment exacted its toll. The portion Brown of the AFL-CIO, who at 74 is legendary in Europe as the defender of free unionism. He says, "I can't the channel in which they have been most effectively used. Moreover, the anti-anti-Communist network is seeking to make public the verbatim deliberations of the NED, in the hope of intimidating applicants.

The endowment infuriates the left because its money is put to good use. Next November, at appropriations time, look for another eye-popping revelation by the dwindling clutch of activist congressional staffers and advocacy journalists. Objective editors may then ask: Why the "keeper"?

A U.S. Pact With Israel Makes Sense

By Wolf Blitzer

WASHINGTON - This is a good time for America and larael to start moving more seriously toward a formal defense pact h would be in the best interests of both.
Washington and Jerusalem man take quick steps to curtail the damage caused by the arrest last month of Jonathan Jay Pollard, an American intelligence analyst accused of selline information to Israel. The two coun tries have some serious thinking to de about the state of their relationship. While making certain that the Pollard affair does not happen again, they would do well to consider a formal security agreement.

On the surface it may sound ridiculous to press this notion now, at a time when the two countries are at odds. But that is precisely the reason to accelerate a project that has apparently been gaining currency for some time among Israeli and U.S. officials.

Washington was understandably upset by the Pollard case, and U.S. Israeli cooperation on malitary and intelligence matters has slowed somewhat since the case came to light. It would however, be a mistake to pro-long this slowdown. The Umited States suffers when it punishes Israel in this way, since Israel makes a coasiderable contribution to American national security. It makes no sense for Washington to weaken Israel's intelligence-gathering capabilities.

When analysts at the State Department, the Pentagon or the CIA cut back their routine exchange of information with the Israeli Embassy in Washington, government officials in Israel quickly retaliate by sharing less of their information with the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv. Embassy in Tel Aviv. The end result of any go-slow in intelligence cooperation is less knowledge for both countries about terrorist activities, Soviet military ca-pabilities, radical Arab politics and other subjects of mutual interest. Who benefits? The Russians, their radical Arab allies and terrorists.

Ironically, Mr. Pollard's arrest came just as U.S.-Israeli strategic cooperation reached a new high. In the past two years Haifa has emerged as a major American naval facility in the eastern Mediterranean. The two countries have engaged in joint military maneuvers, medical evacuation exercises and extensive contingency planning. Israel is allowing the Voice of America to build a powerful radio transmitter on its territory, and Jerusalem has agreed to participate in the the Strategic Defense Initial research and development of the Strategic Defense Initiative.

America also has important interests in the Arab world. How would pact? Most Arab leaders understand that Washington and Jerusalem have a de facto alliance, and they recognize that America would not allowt Israel to disappear. A signed document would merely confirm this, and America's hands in dealing with the Middle East would not be tied much more than they are at present. There would, however, be less room for confusion and unpleasant surprises. There might be some disadvan-tages from Israel's point of view. Could Israel undertake unilateral military actions against the Arabs if it were part of a formal pact? Would it be able to strike against PLO head-quarters in Tunisia, knock out an Iraqi nuclear reactor, send forces to rescue hostages in Entebbe or invade Lebanon? Probably not - not without formal consultation. But in the long run, for most Israelis the added sense of security would probably be worth the price -- especially as the skyrocketing cost of weaponry continues to cripple the israeli economy. Some Israelis would surely oppose a pact, and many would complain about the loss of independence. But there is an emerging consensus among both Labor and Likud leaders that Israel's long-term interests would benefit by putting the alliance in writing. Israeli leaders tend to be legalistic negotiators, and most would undoubtedly feel more secure with such formal codification.

In addition, Israelis would be more confident about their ability to meet future security threats, and as a result many would be encouraged to take more risks for peace.

The benefits outweigh the risks: Let America and Israel turn the Pollard mishap to mutual advantage

McManaway Jr., has been in Washington since early this mouth, in part for discussions of the human rights issue. The State Department is expected to make a decision by mid-January.

Some diplomats said they be-lieved that a reduction in U.S. aid would intensify Haiti's severe economic problems and further threaten the stability of the government. For those reasons, the diplomats said they doubted that aid would be reduced. The United States considers Haiti strategically important cause it is only about 580 miles (930 kilometers) from Florida and iust across the Windward Passage from Cuba.

Where else but in the air can you truly appreciate the safety of your business jet? If it takes you through storms, ice, high altitude turbulence without having to alter its speed or course, it is because it has been built exceptionally strong to weather the toughest conditions and more; this is where it differs from its competitors. The only business jet built alongside some of world's best performing military aircraft had to offer more-safety and strength to airline standards and beyond. You've chosen total safety and reliability. You're flying the unequalled safety and ease of handling at low speeds. The slower a landing, the safer it is. Only two business jets are as slow as the Falcon 100; one is just slow, in the cruise too, the other is a further Falcon model. Ease of handling for the pilot, safe use of many short and difficult runways off-limits to other jets. You've chosen the leading edge in safety and performance. You're flying the Falcon 100.

And moneywise the Falcon 100 guarantees you the best possible protection for your investment, especially in terms of its resale value, universally recognized and appreciated by operators. You've chosen a safe and solid value. You're flying the Falcon 100.

ınkers Foresee a Rush New Issues in Early '86

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS - Investment bankers predict that there will be a record volume of new issues launched in the Eurobond market in the first days of the new year. When investors return from their traditional year-end distractions, they et, there will be a rush to buy bonds. In turn, this is expected prices on existing issues and to narrow, if not eliminate, the r yields that now prevail in the Eurodollar bond market ared with New York.

akers are convinced that interest rates will be tending lower than higher and that this will attract investors to making

Eurodollar floating-notes, which in 1984 barely exceeded fixed-coopon dollar is, were firmly established as the largest single sector of the tet—accounting for $47.67 billion, up 63 percent from last and far outdistancing the $41.45 billion of straight dollar te current conviction that interest rates are headed down was postrated last week when the World Bank sold $300 million >-year bonds — the longest maturity the Eurobond market rea seen. The noncallable bonds, initially set at $200 million ncreased in response to the strong demand, were offered at bearing a coupon of 9% percent and ended the week down 1% ts, well inside the 2%-percent commission.

ESS THE full commission, the World Bank paid 35 basis points more for its money than 30-year Treasury bonds were yielding in New York. The 30-year Treasury, bankers , is a favorite of speculators betting on a drop in interest The high liquidity in that market assures easy trading and term rates are regarded as having the farthest to fall when iven the relatively small size of the World Bank issue, it ld appear to be a less speculative vehicle. Bankers say the and was especially heavy in West Germany, Japan and the igene Rotberg, the World Bank treasurer, noting that the had recently issued 30-year zero-coupon bonds denominata Swiss francs and Deutsche marks, commented that the t issue adds to the evidence that "either Europeans are ared to hold bonds for very long periods or that investors in nee currencies believe that interest rates are going to drop want [long-term] instruments to maximize their potential

r. Rotherg said he believed that rates may decline further, that "when long-term rates reach an eight-year low we want nt liabilities on our books at that rate. If rates go lower, we'll ack in the market for more money."

t present, however, he said the bank, which borrows $10 on to $12 billion annually, is accelerating its plans to issue ow many other borrowers might try to tap the 30-year market en to question. Bankers note that the one condition investors t upon is that the paper be noncallable, and there are not that y high-grade issuers willing to make that commitment. The likely U.S. candidates are public utilities.

addition to the potential capital gains, buyers of the World t bonds are also picking up nearly half a percentage point in me buying 30-year bonds rather than the 10-year bonds uy two other fixed-coupon dollar issues were launched, both 0 years and noncallable. The European Coal and Steel munity sold $100 million of 9%-percent bonds at a price of cutting the yield to 9¼ percent. Statoil, Norway's govern-

Elf, Total Will Drop Saudi Pact

Firms Prefer Netback Pricing

BAHRAIN - France's two maior oil companies will not renew a three-year, fixed-price production contract for about 58,000 barrels per day of Saudi Arabian crude, oil industry sources said Sunday.

They said the companies, Societé Nationale Elf-Aquitaine and Cie.
Française des Pétroles, known as Total, consider the contract, which expires Dec. 31, to have been replaced by a six-month agreement for 50,000 barrels per day.

The new contract, which began Nov. I, uses netback pricing, based on the price of finished products.

The composite did not want to The companies did not want to renew on a fixed-price basis and Saudi Arabia did not want to commit itself to netback pricing for three years, the sources said.

"The oil world has gone to short-term contracts," an oil executive in Saudi Arabia said. "Three year contracts at a fixed price are a thing of the past."

He said he thought that the French companies would be able to continue to draw market-priced oil after the six-month contract ex-

"I think it'll be rolled over as long as it's in the interest of both parties," he said, adding that the Saudis had declared their interest in keeping oil flowing.

"The decision has been made takes. The pricing may shift to a different basis, but it will be market-related," be said.

Under the new contract, Elf and Total each take 25,000 barrels a ay. The old contract allocated 39,000 barrels a day to Elf and 19,000 barrels a days to Total. The sources said, however, that they thought the companies had not taken oil under that agreement since March, mainly because of difficul-ties that refineries in Europe had in making a profit in processing officially priced oil. Elf and Total also have an equal-ly shared contract for 78,000 barrela per day with Iraq.

One source said the contract with Iraq, which expires at the end of the year, was being continued until both sides decided whether to Iraq has been basing prices for much of its oil on the spot market in an effort to increase sales now that it has opened a 500,000-barrelper-day pipeline across Saudi Ara-bia. That pipeline supplements a 1nillion-barrel line through Turkey. Oil began flowing through the Sandi line in Scotember and has nearly reached capacity.

The Iraqi agreement ran out June 30 and was renewed for six months after Iraq reluctantly ap-proved the French companies' demand for spot pricing.

Hyundai Ponys, Korea's first entry in North American market, being loaded for export.

Hyundai Takes Low Road to U.S.

South Koreans Move to Fill Gap in Subcompact Market

By James Risen

Los Angeles Times Service

DETROIT — The little Hyundai Pony, the first South Korean car to enter the North American market, is nothing fancy. A bit like a Chevrolet Chevette or a Toyota Tercel. Its passenger compartment is cramped, and it offers nothing new technologically. It comes from a small country that has a small auto industry, and few can correctly pronounce its brand name (Hun-day).

Hardly the makings for a big hit in today's car market, already overcrowded with subcompact models, right?

Wrong. It is cheap and seemingly reliable, and at the bargain-basement end of the car market, that is all that really matters.

In Canada, in fact, Hyundai already is a certi-

In Canada, in fact, Hyundai already is a certified success. In less than two years on the market and with only two models in its lineup, the Pony and the slightly larger Stellar, Hyundai has become Canada's No. I imported car, stealing the title earlier this year from Japan's Honda Motor Co.

With its sales in Canada still growing, no one there seems to know how far Hyundai will go. After selling a little more than 25,000 cars in Canada in 1024. Hyundai's 1985 sales through Canada in 1984, Hyundai's 1985 sales through November surpassed 74,000, and should easily break 80,000 for the full year. Already, Hyundai accounts for 21.2 percent of all the imported cars sold in Canada and commands an impressive 4.6 percent of the total Canadian car market.

Meanwhile, it has announced plans to open a Canadian assembly plant by 1988, signaling its intent to be in North America for the long hanl.

"Nobody in their right mind would have expected Hynndai to become the No. 1 import in Canada in two years," says Max Jamiesson, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Hyundai Motor America, the company's new U.S. sales arm based in Garden Grove, California.

But after bloodying the established auto compa-nies in Canada, Hyundai Motor Co. will not sur-prise anyone when it moves south early next year. In what is likely to be the first trickle of a flood of inexpensive small cars into the United States from at least three South Korean automakers, Hyundai will introduce an updated, front-wheel-drive version of the rear-drive Pony, called the Excel, on Feb. 15. It will follow with the Stellar in 1987, and later it may expand its U.S. lineup with a light pickup truck, a minivan, a two-seat sporty car, and possibly an executive-style sedan.

And if Hyundai's performance in the U.S. market comes anywhere near its Canadian success, the South Koreans will spark an intensified battle in the overcrowded subcompact market, making it

Airbus Loses VASP Order

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches PARIS - VASP, Brazil's domestic airline, has dropped plans to buy six planes from Airbus Industrie while Trans Australia Airlines has decided to buy nine aircraft from the European consortium, according to officials.

Meanwhile, the flat yield shortterm curve has shut the market for the dollar market directly. floating-rate notes. That was to have been expected in any event since the major takers of paper are banks and they are too occupied closing their books for the year to

The only borrower to tap the market was Credit Lyonnais, which paid no margin over the six-month London interbank offered rate. This is the lowest cost any French issuer has yet paid in the FRN market. Another notable feature was that the lead manager. Lehman Brothers, as in its previous issue for the World Bank, acted as sole manager and underwriter. In Lehman Brothers' view, this helped keep the price of the paper relatively steady look at new issues.

The Euroyen market was relatively active with U.S. issuers -Syntex and CSX - who could benefit from swapping the proceeds into dollars. The coupon rates on the yen bonds are rather inflexible, which means that a top credit-rated U.S. corporate cannot set a low enough coupon on the ven bond to make the swap into dollars sufficiently attractive. By contrast, the lower rated companies can save about half a percentage point by doing the swap rather than tapping

The CSX issue traded best because it offered the highest corpora -6% percent, although the yield to investors was less because of the premium offering price of 100%. Syntex offered a coupon of 6% per-cent at an issue price of 101 and Credit Foncier a coupon of 6% with an issue price of 101. Both issues traded at discounts of around 2% points.

Sumitomo Metal offered a higher coupon of 8 percent (with an issue price of 101%), but the higher coupon reflects the fact that the principal will be repaid in dollars at a fixed exchange rate of 181.50 leaving holders of the paper bear-ing the exchange risk if the yen has reciated more than that in 10 years' time.

The only European currency of-fering was a 250-million-DM floating-rate note for Union Bank of Finland, carrying a capped coupon

As has been the Fed's position for several months, it emphasized the importance of considering busi ness activity, the dollar and inflation in setting monetary policy and permitting the money supply to grow in an effort to foster econon expansion, the minutes showed.

The committee said it believed that the drop in the dollar that had occurred since the meeting of the Group of Five industrial nations on Sept. 22 would tend to have a positive effect on the economy by relieving pressures on trade-sensitive industries. But it also noted that an unduly large and rapid depreciation could have the potential for unsettling economic consequence under present circumstances."

Germany Sees Turnaround In Machine-Tool Industry

More seriously, analysts say the spread of such new materials as plastics and ceramics, preferred for their light weight or durability, and the growing productivity of ma-chine tools, enabling fewer machines to do more, will mean shrinking long-term demand. A recent Boston Consulting Group report for the European Community's commission predicted that world demand in the next years will probably be about 2.5 to 3.5 percent behind average increases of gross national product.

Equally grim, a study by the Munich-based Roland Berger consulting group, done for the West German industry association, said many of its 120 members excelled with conventional products on production centers. stagnant markets and faced the "The process is n menace of strong Japanese incursions. lings. In the long term this came be viewed as a growth industry."

Still, the industry, including resigned. And the way it is fighting back says a lot about the way West German industry does business.

Some companies, such as Maho Werkzeugmaschinenban, a manu-facturer of machining centers, have engaged the Japanese on their own turf, producing standardized machine tools, a tad more robust, perhans, and better tailored to European customer needs.

But the wider trend, at least among companies with the finan-cial underpinning, is to market a broader package of engineering skills, including machine tools and the computer hardware and software needed to link them in large

"The process is not over," Mr. Göhren said, "but our philosophy is different. We don't think in-andout. We think long-term about de-veloping and exploiting markets with a quality product." He paused, and added: "You

That represents a price gain of 5 points in two weeks.

"The market remained in an upbeat mood despite some disap-pointment over the failure to cut the discount rate," William V. Sullivan, Jr., senior vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds, said. "Most people believe the Fed's open market activity was aggressive and a prelude to that move.

Another chapter, another twist to the tale, Givenchy III in 1970, a vital verdant Chypre scent, became an instant classic, still widely appreciated and a best-seller today. A joyful interlude with the spirited Eau de Givenchy, then the perfumed plot thickens with the compelling conquest of Ysatis, destined from its 1984 debut to be one of the great French fragrances.

"The success of a fragrance is an ensemble," says Jean Courtière, president of Partums Givenchy. "Like in the writing of a novel, style and story must concur in a successful accord." Ysaris combines the rich sensuality of a floral blend from the Oxient with a magically mysterious name, exquisitely evoking to each his own interpretation. "For some, Ysatis is a Greek goddess," says Courtière, "for others, Aphrodite's child or the contraction of Yscult and Isis. In reality, Ysatis is gowns, encased in a prizewinning flacon as sleek and sculptural as the Givenchy countre and acclaimed for an advertising campaign featuring the hyper-realist art of Pierre Cou-lon, Ysatis was launched last spring to an exceptionally enthusiastic reception in the United States and has quickly become the Givenchy besteller. The big news this fall was the addition of a perfumed beauty body line. Mens' fragrances, too, share the spotlight at Givenchy: the distinctive refinement of Monsieur de Givenchy in 1959, the intriguing audacity of Gentleman in 1975. The bottom line of their narrative reads as triumphantly as the rest. Acquired by the celebrated champagne firm Veuve Cliquot in 1981, Parfums Givenchy bought back its American subsidiary this year and will report a consolidated turnover of about $56 million in 1985, a 25 percent rise for the French company alone, with "profitability one of the best in the industry," according to Courtiere. Exports to 140 countries account for 70 percent of sales with principal markers, the United States, Britain and Italy. Next to come, a new mens' fragrance which they are currently preparing, though as Courtière says, "Railways have timetables, creativity does not." When it arrives, it promises to be yet another enthralling episode in the spellbinding sags of the

Kuwait Ends Inquiry Into Santa Fe Takeover

Renters

KUWAJT — Kuwait has ended an inquiry into insider trading in the $2.5-billion takeover of Santa Fe International Corp., a U.S. oil company, by the government-owned Kuwait Petroleum Co.

The Kuwait news agency Kuna, in a report saturday, gave no details of the investigation into the 1982 takeover. It said a report on the investigation by the attorney-general, which was ordered in June, had been sent to the cabinet. 27% 27% + 1/2 11/4 17% + 1/2 11/4 17% + 1/2 11/4 17% + 1/2 11/4 17% + 1/2 11/4 11% - 1/2 20% 20% + 1/2 11/4 17% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% + 1/2 10% 20% - 1/2

At least a few Japanese industry officials still predict that they will not fall prey to the South Koreans in the same way that the domestics have given in to them in the small

"Hyundai will be competitive, and very possibly could cause greater price competition, but we are not going to abandon that entry-level market," says Cliff Schmillen, senior vice president for U.S. sales at Honda "And I don't think it's going to affect our sales at

But analysts believe that may be wishful thinking.
"Some of the Japanese like to say they are not concerned, but they are only kidding themselves," notes Donald DeScenza, an auto industry angles with N try analyst with Nomura Securities, a Japanese-owned brokerage.

More and more Japanese industry officials are starting to agree, and now concede that they are getting worried.

"We think it will become very, the market with the Koreans com-ing in," says Jerry Giaquinta, a spokesman for Toyota Motor Co.'s U.S. sales operation. "It's going to be a real shoot-out."

In fact, since the Japanese are so dominant in the subcompact market, they have the most to lose to the South Koreans, analysts say. The Japanese basically own the low end of the market already, so the Koreans will steal sales mostly from them," predicts Vern Lacey, an auto industry economist at Chase Econometrics, an economic forecasting concern in Bala Cyn-wyd, Pennsylvania. With an expected base sticker of about $5,500, the Hymdai Excel gouging by dealers on cars in short will be one of the least expensive supply, the addition of expensive small cars on the U.S. market, price-competi-tive with the cheapest Japanese cars available in the Unit-

Toyota Submits Application For Joint-Venture in Taiwan

TAIPEI — Japan's Toyota Motor Co. has submitted a formal application to Taiwan's government to establish a joint venture here that would produce 60,000 cars and small trucks annually.

According to the application, submitted Friday to the Investment Commission, Toyota and Taiwan's Kuo Jui Motor Co. would produce 40,000 cars and 20,000 trucks each year. The plant, if approved, is expected to begin production in 1988.

Gentano Tsuji, Toyota's vice president, declined to reveal how much the company would invest. Industry observers said, however, that Toyota planned to invest $130 million in the venture, in which it would hold a 49-percent share, and Kuo Jui, a manufacturer of heavy-duty trucks, would supply 51 percent.

In September 1984 Toyota withdrew a joint-venture proposal to invest $21.6 billion in a factory that would have produced 300,000 vehicles annually because of high duties on imported parts. Industry observers said Toyota reconsidered investing after Taiwan's government registed regulations requiring manufacturers to use a minimum. ment revised regulations requiring manufacturers to use a minimum percentage of Taiwan-made parts.

No. 1 importer in the United States in a couple of years like we did in Canada," Mr. Jamiesson says. "But it would be silly to say that's not a long-range goal for us."

The South Koreans are coming at a time when the Japanese may be more vulnerable than ever in the U.S. market. Because their passenger-car shipments have been re-stricted by import quotas since 1981, the Japanese automakers have been concentrating on selling larger, more expensive cars in the bigger.

That opens the way for automakers from developing countries such as South Korea that are not yet restricted by quotas and which can produce small cars while paying wages that are only a fraction of what automorkers earn in the Unitwhat autoworkers earn in the Unit-

Ironically, the South Koreans are rapidly expanding their production capacity with the help of the U.S. and Japanese automakers themselves, all of whom want to ensure that they have access to a supply of Korean-built cars as the competition in the U.S. car market intensifies in the late 1980s.

One sign that Hyundai has a chance of sweeping the United States has come from U.S. car dealers, who have been tripping over each other in their efforts to get Hyundai franchises. Judge Reverses Dartmouth Coach's Ouster

CONCORD, New Hampshire (AP) — In a decision that was hailed by a coaching association as a step toward protecting coaches jobs, a judge has ruled that Joe Yukica, who was dismissed last month as football coach of Dartmouth, should be reinstated until his contract expires in June 1987.

Should be reinstated until his contract expires in June 1987.

Grafton County Superior Court Judge Walter Murphy ruled in Haverhill that Dartmouth's athletic director, Ted Leland, was not justified when he relieved Yukica from his coaching job on Nov. 29. Yukica, whose record was 33-41-3 overall and 2-7-1 this year, had sued Leland to prevent Dartmouth from hiring another

THAT BOWLING ALLEY ON THE TIBER: Tales of a Director

By Michelangelo Antonioni. Translated from the Italian by William Arrowsmith. 208 pages. $18.95.

Oxford University Press, 200 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

COTOWARD the Frontier," one of the 33 sketches in this collection, reads like a kind of composite summary of every Antonioni movie you've ever seen. Four people, thrown together by circumstance, are traveling through a bleak landscape toward some un-named border: the director; a pretty German woman whom everyone calls Grethe, though Grethe is not her name; a U. S. Army captain; and another young girl. They do not know one another very well, but they have in common a vague sense of alienation, a need to improvise their evenings together.

They stop at a guest house and receive a cordial enough welcome. The mood, however, seems rather sinister, though it is unclear whether something is really wrong or whether the travelers are simply a bit tired. Occasionalby someone enters the room, and the atmosphere appears to shift. The travelers leave and drive into a dark wood, where they see two figures, a man and a woman — possibly people glimpsed earlier at the guest house. A shot is heard, and the woman vanishes — maybe she is dead, maybe she is not. The travelers continue on the road, their headlights turned off.

Like its companion pieces in "That Bowling Alley on the Tiber," this sketch represents what Antonioni calls a "nucleus"—an idea for a film. While each sheds light on the director's decidedly depressive sensibility, they vary widely in weight, seriousness and just plain interest. Some feel like no more than entries in a moody adolescent's journal — news items or observations, jotted down for the sake of their bizarreness or irony. One reads, in its entirety: The antarctic glaciers are moving in our direc-tion at a rate of three millimeters per year. Calculate when they'll reach us. Anticipate, in a film, what will happen." Another merely notes that a group of people on a crocodile-hunting expedition was eaten by its prey.

More interesting are the "nuclei" that help illuminate the process by which Antonioni begins formulating a film. In most cases, seems, he starts with an image or an observe tion, then works backward to determine probable situation. The sight of a robust me leaving a bowling court in Rome, for instance triggers speculation about his persentality an past, leading eventually to a scenario in which the man casually shoots a young girl

Because few of the sketches are dated, it is difficult to tell whether Antoniora dress upon any of them for movies or whether wome of them only echo themes and motils from earliepictures. Many of the pieces depict sterile relationships, remainiscent of those portrayed in such films as "La Notte" and "Red Desert."

"The Silence" suggests a story about a "harsband and wife who have nothing more to say to each other"; "Two Telegrams" is a portrait of a disaffected woman who has been rejected by the husband she despises; "The Desert of Money" and "The Wheel" are tales of man who shuttle aimlessly between two wranch; and "A Pack of Lies" is a study of the deceptive sexual transactions that transpire arrang a group of five people. As in Antonioni's matter the people in these stories tend to be juded members of the urban bourgeousic, trapped in rote existences that are devoid of value, and of Human inability to distinguish between ap pearance and reality, between the projections of the mind and factual events in the world - 2 theme examined at length in the movie "Blow-Up" — is also an issue that surfaces repeatedly. Not only do many of the sketches pivel around a mysterious or violent event - a gunshot, an unexplained brawl, a confession of patricide their narrative method also emphasizes the subjectivity of experience. A barren landscap mirrors a character's desolate state of mind; dangerous encounter appears to synchronize with an individual's sudden craving for adven-

As the translator, William Arrowsmith points out in a pretentious, nearly unreadable introduction, "the energy of the nucleus may be dormant, abeyant, or latent, but it is there — a miniature cinematic potentiality awaiting that intervention by director and camera that will thrust it toward full visual and kinetic actualization." In other words, the sketches in "That Bowling Alley" are just that - sketches. bereft of the visual imagery that would endow them with cinematic power. As such, they tend to underline some of the less satisfying aspects of Antonion's art: his penchant for willfully dwelling upon — and then universalizing — examples of alienation; his predilection for contriving situations that artificially illustrate a given intellectual premise. Whereas such movies as "The Passenger" and "L'Avventura" derive much of their power from their coolly lyrical documentation of life's ambiguities — by showing a series of enigmatic scenes that may or may not be connected, they force the audience to make its own analogies — these sketches browbeat the reader with moralizing comments and wordy explications of what various symbols and actions mean. Reading 'That Bowling Alley on the Tiber recalls a statement once made by the director about scripts: "They are dead words on the page, trying to explain things which should not be explained in words."

They get a week off before they play their first playoff game, either Jan. 4 or Jan. 5 in the Orange Bowl.

The Bills contributed to their demise, getting flagged for 19 penal-ties for 123 yards and twice failing to score from inside the Miami five yard line. The Bills also lost three interceptions and three fumbles two of the turnovers setting up two Miami scores.

Chiefs 38, Chargers 34: In Kansas City, Missouri, Stephone Paige broke a 40-year-old NFL record with 309 yards in pass receptions for the Chiefs, Paige, a third-year pro from Fresno State, caught touchdown passes of 56 and 84 yards in the first half. His 309 yards, on only eight receptions, surpassed the mark of 303 yards set Nov. 22, 1945, by Jim Beaton of the Cleve-

The Chargers rallied valiantly in the fourth quarter to close to four points, scoring three unanswered

Paige had 258 yards receiving in the first half alone on receptions covering 56, 51, 30, 17, 84, and 20 yards. He caught a 39-yard pass from Bill Kenney in the third quarter, was shaken up on the play, but returned to the game and broke the record with a 12-yard catch, his shortest of the game, in the fourth

The Chargers' running back, Lionel James, set an NFL record for all-purpose yardage. He had 242 running, receiving and kick returning for a season total of 2,535, breaking the record of 2,462 set by Terry Metealf of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1975.

Bears 37, Lions 17: In Pontiac, Michigan, Dennis Gentry returned the second half kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and Chicago matched the league record for most victories in a regular season. The Bears, who locked up the NFC Central Division title and a home-field advantage for the play-offs five weeks ago, equaled the 15-1 mark set by the 1984 San Francis-

The Bears' running back, Walter Payton, also entered the record books, becoming the first player in to go over 2,000 total yards in three consecutive seasons. Against the Lions, he rushed for 81 yards on 17 carries and caught 4 passes for 55 yards. He also threw a 50-yard pass. Payton finished the season with 2,034 total yards.

Packers 20, Buccaneers 17: In Tampa, Florida, Phillip Epps scored on a 30-yard flanker reverse in the first quarter and Jessie Clark ran 6 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown as mistake-prone Green Bay pulled out a victory.

The triumph enabled the Packers to finish the season with their third straight 8-8 record, while Tampa Bay completed its first campaign under their coach Leeman Bennett with a 2-14 mark that will give them the first overall pick in next spring's NFL draft.

Sweden Retains Davis Cup in Last Match After Becker's Aces Trump Wilander

By Nesha Starcevic The Associated Press

MUNICH - Stefan Edberg defeated Michael Westphal, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-3, on Sunday in the last match of the Davis Cup final to give Sweden its second consecutive title with a dramatic 3-2 victory over West Germany in the international team tournament.

Boris Becker had beaten Mats Wilander, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, in the afternoon to even the best-of-five Wilander, the French Open champion, put Sweden abead on Friday by winning the opening sin-gles against Westphal. Becker, the Wimbledon champion, defeated Edberg to even the score, but Sweden regained the lead when Wilander and Joakim Nystrom won Saturday's doubles against Becker and Andreas Maurer, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

Westphal, ranked 51st in the world, appeared to be taking West Germany to its first Davis Cup title when he won the opening set against Edberg, 19, the Australian Open champion who is ranked fifth in the world.

But Edberg broke Westphal's booming serve in the 12th game of the second set and tied the match. In the third set the Swede again trailed after dropping his service in the opening game, but again came back to take the lead.

He saved two game points as the 12th game went to five deuces, then broke Westphal to win the set, 7-5. The turning point of the match came in the sixth game of the third set. Edberg stretched and was able to return a cross-court shot. Westphal misjudged the ball and let it go by him, and it bounced just inside

Westphal then dropped his ser-vice and it was 3-3. Edberg, attacking Westphal's weaker second serve, broke again in the 10th game to win the set.

He dominated Westphal in the fourth set, breaking serve in the eighth game, then held his own service to win the last game at love and keep the title in Sweden.

Westphal aced Edberg 23 times, but was too inconsistent late in the match. Edberg served 13 aces, and was devastating at the net.

Becker, 18, who is ranked sixth in the world, was equally devastating against Wilander, ranked No. 3. He gave Wilander a taste of what was to come when he served two aces in winning the opening game

Boris Becker of West Germany concentrated on returning a shot against Mats Wilander of Sweden. Becker's 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory tied the teams at 2-2 in the Davis Cup final.

served 14 aces on the fast carpet ping his service at love in the eighth surface and appeared to be in top shape, except in the second set.

He was especially effective in the last set, coming out of the locker room following a 10-minute break after the third set to take a 3-0 lead without dropping a point.

Wilander squandered two game points after being taken to deuce in the sixth game of the first set. A linesman then called a foot fault and Wilander was clearly upset as he netted a backhand after a rare rally to drop his service and give Becker a 4-2 lead.

Becker served out the set at love to take the lead.

Wilander started the second set aggressively, repeatedly charging the net for winning volleys. He broke Becker for the first time in the second game of the second set when Becker double-faulted twice in a row.

Wilander struggled in the fifth game, but saved two game points to hold his serve and take a 4-1 lead. In the next game, Becker stumbled and fell to the ground and troubled as he missed several easy the third sets, but in the fourth shots at the start of the third set. As there was nothing I could do. he muttered to himself and shook to take a 1-0 lead.

The turning point came in the next game when Becker stretched to full length to return a drop volley that landed close to the net. Becker won the point and received a thunderous ovation from the capacity crowd of 13,000 at Olympic Hall. In a gesture of elation, Becker clinched his fists and the crowd responded. From then on he was unstoppable. He served three game-winning aces as he powered his way to victory in 2 hours and 16 mir Becker won the last set and the match when he held his serve at love in the final game, the winning point coming when Wilander hit a orehand long.

Becker said he took six painilling tablets before the match and "I am as happy about winning these two matches here in the Davis Cup final as I am about winning Wimbledon," he said. "Especially because I beat two players who are ranked higher than I am."

"Boris played incredibly well the fourth set." Wilander said. "I felt bad about losing the first and "I don't think my serve is really his head, Wilander held his service good enough against Boris on a surface like this. He got only five aces on the fast carpet surface laid on a specially-installed asphalt foundation. "The hosts always choose a surface they prefer in the Davis Cup; it's normal," he said. "We chose clay last year when we beat the United States to win the title."

Wilander and Nystrom, one of the too doubles teams in the world, had outclassed Becker and Maurer in 1 hour and 18 minutes Saturday. The West Germans were so outplayed in the second and third sets that many in the capacity crowd of 13,000 started leaving long before the end, With Sweden leading by 3-2 in the second set, Becker and Maurer won only two points in the next seven games as Wilander and Nystrom closed out the second set and raced to a 4-0 lead in the third. "We thought before the match that we could break Maurer's serve, but we didn't expect to do it so often," Wilander said. Maurer, ranked 32d in the world, lost five of his six serves.

Violinist Viktoria Mullova's 'Inner Development'

By Lon Tuck Vashington Post Service WASHINGTON — The Americanization of Viktoria Mullova began long before she got to the United States. The last book the award-winning violinist read before defecting from the Soviet Union two years ago was "Gone With the Wind" ("It took a whole month"). But a day before playing at the Reagans'
"Christmas in Washington" program, she kept referring to "this mad, crazy life in America."

Why, then, did she come west? "Inner development, I could not live and die" in the Soviet Union. Mullova, who is 26, won the gold medal in violin at the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow in 1982. In 1983, she and Vakhtang Jordania, conductor of the Kharkov Symphony in the Ukraine, arranged a performance in Finland and slipped across the bor-der to Sweden. They took with them two violin bows in a plastic bag. They left behind Mullova's Stradivarius and Jordania's wife and two children.

At the Moscow Conservatory, Mullova's teacher was Leonid Kogan, next to David Oistrakh the greatest Soviet violinist of his generation. Mullova and Jorda-nia, now 43, met when he was asked to help prepare her for the she won. In 1971 Jordania had won the Herbert von Karajan competition in West Berlin, but the Soviet Ministry of Culture had not allowed him to travel since, and his hopes of conducting in the West had withered. It was his idea that they defect. Deciding to defect and actually doing it though, were two different things, especially for the woman who had just won the Tchai-kovsky competition. They talked about the possibility on long walks, never within earshot of their families. Mullova was still a student at the Moscow Conservatory, and she was supposed to finish her studies. She had had a tour of the Philippines, because Imelda Marcos had attended the competition and insisted that she come, but other invitations were rejected. Then, in early 1983, she was told she would be able to play in Helsinki in late June but would have to find a new pianist. If it could be Jordania, they would have their chance - except that he had not been allowed abroad since the Karajan competition. And he was not exactly a pianist.

As Mullova told Joe Klein for an article in New York magazine, she visited Tikhon Khrennikov, head of the Soviet Union of Composers. She told him she and Jor-dania, as her pianist, wanted to leave for Finland, where they planned to play one of his pieces as a featured part of the program, a debut outside the Soviet Union. But, she said, the KGB was giving them problems. The day after her visit to Khrennikov, the KGB gave in. In Helsinki, the reviews of Mullova were ecstatic and those of negative. Mullova told their KGB chaperone to leave them alone because Jordania was depressed by the reviews. The two hailed a taxi and crossed the border into Swe-

They had not told their families of their plans. Mullova said of the relatives she left behind: "I worry a lot, of course. And we were lucky. Nothing happened to them. Maybe it was because they did not know."

Mullova is playing this season at the Kennedy Center in Wash-ington with the Boston Sympho-ny and the Philadelphia Orchestra. She made her Washington debut playing the Sibelius Con-certo with the Boston Symphony, and recently recorded the Sibelius and Tchaikovsky concertos with concerts immediately" after defecting. "I thought . . . immediately after you come to the West, you play in Carnegie Hall with the best orchestras in the world. Because we have disinformation in the Soviet Union, we think everything here is fine, evcrything is fantastic, everybody has big houses, big cars. It's unbelicvable.

"For me, it was not surprising that I had immediate concerts. But now I feel I was really lucky. But at the time, I thought it was quite normal. I didn't realize it usually takes two years ahead to plan a concert schedule."

Last summer an anonymous foundation bought Mullova a Stradivarius for £286,000 (then about $343,000) at a London auction, and she and Jordania spent seven weeks at Rudolf Serkin's summer festival at Mariboro, Vermont. The latter event seems to have left a more lasting impres-

Of Serkin, 82, she said twice, as if in wonder, "He is so serious about music." They prepared the Beethoven C-minor Trio together. "It is his seriousness that makes him so special," she said. "He doesn't care about career or fame. He is this old man. But, in fact, he is very young. What he cares about is what is written by the composer - each dot, each crescendo. After that, it opened to myself so many things that I did not have before."

Continuing on the subject of influences, she came up with an unexpected one: Mana Callas. Listening to her recordings was so helpful. She was great. Her phrasing — it was so musical. Sometimes it's hard to express how she does it, the way she builds her phrase. It's wonder-

She was asked if she wouldn't be a natural talk-show personality, like Luciano Pavarotti. She seemed to dismiss the idea, but not completely: "You can do it once. You can do it twice. And I understand that for the public it's important. Especially for the American public. So you have to do it." Then suddenly she blurted, "But can you imagine Serkin on

Roll Over and Play Human, Phydeau

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — Canine nomenclature is tak-ing a turn toward the human. In olden times, we often named dogs for their disposition. Raver was chosen for dogs who liked to wander off, or Fide, from the Latin for "faithful." for those who preferred to hang around. Friskie was considered appropriate if the animal was not unduly lackadaisical, and sometimes a touch of sarcasm was added by calling a lazy mutt Lightnin'. In those days we named dogs for their appearance: Spot was popular, as was Rags for the disheveled, and no neighborhood was complete without a Labrador retriever named Blackie Regal qualities were a source of names: King, Prince, Duke and Baron were popular, along with Queenie, Princess and Duchess. Ever title-conscious, and slightly behind the times, President and Mrs. Reagan have just chosen the name Rex for their new Cavalier King Charles spaniel; Rex is the title of a reigning king, and a questionable choice made by a leader of a democracy (Gerald R. Ford's dog was the suitable Liberty. Mrs. Reagan explained that Rev was named after a member of the White House staff).

Disposition and appearance are still sources of dog names, but lately we tend to give our dogs names left over from children we never had, or we name them after favorite uncles or cartoon characters or rock after favorite uncles or cartoon characters or rock stars. Instead of turning verbs and adjectives into proper nouns (for example, calling a puppy that likes to nip your finger Nipper), we are using proper nouns directly, calling the little nipper George, Daisy or Charley. I used to have a German shepherd named Henry, after Henry A. Kissinger, because at one time I was irritated with my Nixon administration colleague and wanted to be able to say "Down, Henry!" after a hard day at the West Wing. hard day at the West Wing.

My evidence of the growing humanization of dog-naming is more than anecdotal. A few months ago, 410 Lexicographic Irregulars read a query on the subject and responded with about 12,000 names for dogs. I have the correspondence piled up in little categorized mounds around the office. The biggest pile is "Names of People," and the names that appear most frequently in it are Max, Belle, Ginger, Walter and Sam. The names of cartoon characters appear of ten: Snoopy and his beagle brother Spike are obvious sources that also embody characteristics, but Poindexter is a pure 'name" taken from a smarty-pants human character

Some common human names are rare in dogs: You don't find Bill, Bob (although David Letterman talks on television about his dog Bob), Barbara or Jane as often as Winston (big in bulldogs) or Sheba. We're beginning to see more of Fred in both humans and dogs, and there has been a recent run on Vanessa and Rebecca. My golden retriever is Rufus, the name of Churchill. Churchill's dog, and my Bernese mountain dog is

One tradition that continues is the linking of breeds identified with specific countries to names of people from those countries. "Sled dogs — malamutes, Siberian huskies — often have the Russian ending -asha in their names," reports Elizabeth Watson, a breeder and trainer, of Brackenbriar Kennels, in Middleway, West Virginia. "Awful lot of Sasha, Tasha and Masha."

Similarly, 100 many Irish setters are named to German shepherds Fritz and huskes Nanaok. Several correspondents say they call their French poodle, Phydeau which shows some originality; it beats Fift

Not all dog owners are bestowing human names on animals, however. Disposition is still a source, but the names are symbolic: Pepper is an example of disposition once removed, rivaling Bandat and Misty in popularity. Some watchers of beer commercials call their animals Gusta, and hound owners like Sad Sait Although Rover is now rare, similar qualities are recalled in Solo, Gypsy, Scooler, Streuker, Ruscal and Scamp. This carries on the grand tradition ened in Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," in which the clownish Launce has a dog named Crain: "I think Crab my dog be the sourcest-natured dog that ina stone, a very pebble stone, and has no m pity in him than a dog." Certain syllables recur: -te and -y are the favorite endings, perhaps because large animals seem less frightening if named with a diminutive like Buky. frightening if named with a diministry meet bridy. (Conversely, owners of tyke-like breeds like to call their tiny friends Killer, Monster or Godzilla.) Another hot sound is uf: "Dozens of pets at the Another hot sound is uf: "Dozens of pets at the Another hot sound is uf: "Dozens of pets at the Another Animal Center, in South Elgin, Illinois," reports Lislie Mann Smith, "are named Buffy, Duffy, Fuffy, Muffigure, and the sound of the control of the con and Puff: (That sounds preppy; sure enough; cita-tions include Preppie, Muffie, Yuppie, Worthington, Percival, Cambridge and Andrea.)

Boozehounds name their dogs after their favorite drinks. Brandy is one of the most popular casine names, perhaps because it is also the name of a color but Whiskey (for Scotties, it is spelled Whisky) is ened frequently, as are Boocer and Tonic, Soda and Chaser Foods are also used, because people like to same animals after things that provide enjoyment. Cook Candy, Taffy, Peaches, Oatmeul, Gingersnap, Noodes 3 and Cinnamon abound, with more with-it types adding Yoguri, Tofu and Mayo (Hold the Mayo!) Color? Blackie still prowls the neighborhood, but is likely to be shadowed by Ebony. Charcoal, Soon and Midnight. (I once claimed to have a per named Preve and was hailed by a man with a bete he called Nore)

HE nicknames of the jobs of owners are often applied to pets: lawyers like Shyster and Escrow; doctors prefer Bones; tennis stars try Topspin. Techno-crats have named their dogs Gluch and Ergo (probably rooted in "ergonomics." if the dog is owner-friendly). One stereo engineer came up with Woofer.

A veterinarian, Dr. Steven H. Steinberg of Gaithers burg, Maryland, spots a trend: "Dogs now come in better dressed than we are. You should see them jeweled collars, fancy vests, some even dressed in exwarmers. To reflect that look, they need the names they are given - like Madonna." So farewell, old Sport: nobody names you the anymore, or Ace, or Jack London's "Call of the Wild-Buck. A pundit I know calls his Rhodesian Ridgeback Zim, after Zimbabwe, the new name for Rhodesia we're getting sophisticated. The most appropriately named dog I ever knew was a German shephend owned by the novelist Herman Wouk, Barkis was his name, after the character in Dickens's novel "David Copperfield" who liked to say, "Barkis is willin'.
